Migrant Sound is a London based, not-for-profit organisation that aims at promoting the work of composers of the Greek diaspora.

In collaboration with Ensemble Exposé, Migrant Sound aims at a first contact with contemporary research in composition by Greeks who live and work in different European countries.

The participant composers are researchers active in various fields of music making. Having studied and worked as musicians in and outside of academia, they produce work that is the result of fusion, juxtaposition and exchange between contemporary international movements in composition and the arts. Their compositional output has been appreciated through successful participation in international competitions, academic research, awards and scholarships, collaboration with distinguished performers and the release of recordings in a variety media.

Migrant Sound has received funding from the following organisations: A.G. Leventis Foundation, Goldsmiths University of London, Intralot S.A. (Greece), National Bank of Greece S.A. (London Branch).
